Hedge Fund Overlap Tracker - Q4 2025 13F Filings

Report Generated: May 8, 2026

Executive Summary

Q4 2025 13F filings reveal significant positioning in AI infrastructure, semiconductors, and data center plays. Point72 leads with $89.4B AUM (+49.6% QoQ), while SIT (Leopold Aschenbrenner) made a dramatic pivot from marquee chip names to AI infrastructure and power generation.

KEY INSIGHT: The Infrastructure Pivot

Aschenbrenner's SIT fund exited NVIDIA ($299M) and Broadcom ($76M) while aggressively building positions in power generation (Bloom Energy: $911M), data centers (CoreWeave: $1.2B), and Bitcoin miners repurposing energy assets for AI workloads. This signals conviction that the AGI bottleneck has shifted from chips to power, cooling, and physical data-center capacity.

Themes & Takeaways

1. AI Infrastructure > AI Chips

SIT's dramatic pivot suggests the smart money is moving downstream from semiconductor manufacturers to the physical infrastructure powering AI.

2. China Tech Remains Contested

Tepper still holds significant Alibaba despite reducing; other whales avoiding direct China exposure.

3. Big Tech Still Dominates

AMZN, MSFT, META, GOOG appear across multiple portfolios - the 'Magnificent 7' trade is crowded but persistent.

4. Power & Data Centers Ascendant

New positions in Bloom Energy, CoreWeave, Kilroy Realty, and Bitcoin miners signal infrastructure build-out positioning.
